

PITCHER WILLIAM DINEEN

Big Bill Dineen, the giant twirler of the Boston Americans, had his wishes granted when Taylor announced that Dineen would hereafter wear the uniform of the St. Louis Browns of the same league. Dineen was swapped for Pitcher Jacobson, of St. Louis, and this deal followed close on the transfer of Collins and the signing of the new manager, Jim McGuire. Dineen has not done very effective work for Boston for two years and he has been looking for his release for some time. He did not win a single game for Boston this season. Jacobson played with Washington before being transferred to St. Louis last year.

SCIENTIFIC BASEBALL IS ENJOYED BY SPECTATORS

Demand for Heavy Hitting by "Fans" Is Second to That for Short Games.

American followers of baseball are unwittingly, but nevertheless willingly, being educated to the national pastime in its most scientific phase. The game as now played has probably reached a point little short of perfection, considering it from a scientific viewpoint. It is almost impossible to find a flaw in the present day article, as played by teams in either the major or minor leagues, and that the baseball public enjoys it is attested to by the millions that pay their checkbooks at the box offices each season.

For a long time there was a cry that the game was becoming deadened because of light hitting. There was a demand for modifications in the rules, which would tend to add this feature to the sport. Various things and methods were proposed and devised to do away with the imaginary evil, but happily the changes have never been made. This leads to the question, Do fans really want heavy batting contests? Much slugging lengthens the game and if there is anything that the people who support the game demand it is short games. Lengthen the games by increasing the batting, and there will be a noticeable falling off in the attendance. In addition to lengthening games, much scientific play must be sacrificed, by too free use of the wagon tongue. Where a game is short and snappy, scientific play is at a premium. It is displayed in every move and action of the men in the field and the spectators sit in wrapt wonder at the precision like action of the athletes.

That spectators are awakening to the possibilities of the game from a scientific viewpoint is shown by their feeling in regard to the bunt game. Not so many years ago when a batter attempted to bunt he was greeted with cries of "hit it out," "hit it, you dummy," etc. Now this is all changed. Hardly a murmur comes from the stands when a man tries to sacrifice a runner ahead by bunting, and even if he goes out on bunt strikes he is often applauded for his effort. In fact, failure to play the bunt game when occasion requires, often raises a howl from the bleachers. Time has created many changes in the sport, but none greater than the change in popular regard of scientific baseball.

MAJOR LEAGUE NOTES

Stone's batting eye is still dimmed. He is not even hitting at a .200 clip for St. Louis.

"Harry Niles is a revelation," says Jimmy McAleer. "He is hitting and fielding in sensational style."

Tiger catchers have had more passed balls than any other backstops.

Pitcher Lakoff has been returned to the Detroit club by Little Rock.

The Washington club has released pitcher Frank Kison to the New York club.

Scanlon, Notre Dame's great pitcher, is a brother of the Brooklyn player.

Pastorius, the Brooklyn southpaw, is one of the National league's best fielding pitchers.

The slin guards of catcher Clark, of Cleveland are different from Bresnahan's. They do not project above the knees, as do Roger's.

The sun field at Cleveland is considered by the majority of the American league players to be the worst in the league. It never seems to bother Elmer Flick.

PREMIER PITCHERS OF THE NATIONAL PASTIME

Wonderful Winning Records of Star Slab Artists Made in Recent Years.

A correspondent inquires: "What pitcher won the largest number of games in any one year?" In reply is given the following table showing the winning pitcher of the three principal leagues for some years back. It is impossible to answer a question like this with certainty, as many of the minor leagues do not include this item in their averages. And, as a matter of fact, it means nothing anyway. A pitcher's real worth is not shown by the games he wins.

The best winning percentage in the National league in the past 12 years is .826, made last year by Ed Heubach. However, Hoffer and Hughes and Chesbro practically had the same percentage and pitched a dozen more games.

In the American league Bernhardt's 1902 record of .783 is the best. It is of interest to note that Sam Lever has been the National's winning pitcher three different seasons, and McGinnity twice.

The highest percentage of victories ever won in this association was .833, by Waddell in 1899. The best record, however, was Hughson's, in 1896, when he pitched 53 games and lost but ten of them.

The best minor league record for an entire season was made by Bruce, of Toronto, in 1902, when he won 18 and lost two games, an average of .900.

In 1905, Nagle, of Los Angeles, won every game he pitched, 11 in all.

In 1898, Altrock, then with Grand Rapids, won 17 and lost three, a percentage of .850.

Last year Hale, of Dayton, in the Central league, won 12 and lost two, an average of .856. Hall, of Sioux City, won nine and lost one. Phillips, of Mobile, won 11 and lost one. Blaine Durbin, of Joplin, now with Chicago, won 32 and lost eight. Hughes, of Atlanta, won 25 and lost five. The records:

Collins Traded for Knight.

Connie Mack, manager of the Philadelphia American league baseball club, has secured James Collins, of the Boston American league team, and he is playing third base for the Philadelphia team. John Knight, who has been playing third base for the local team, has gone to Boston.

An Amateur Record.

Frank Allen, of Mississippi, pitcher for the Southwestern Presbyterian university baseball team, may have broken the world's record in a game with Bowling Green league team recently, when he completed 64 innings without a score being made against him. The record of a pitcher in college games is said to be 62 innings.

WHY?

Perhaps you wonder, now and then, What joy there is in living. The cry within is hard to still; The way seems always up the hill, The briars unrelenting.

Perhaps you struggle with your load Gripped tight in fingers horny; It seems, somehow, it doesn't pay To worry on the self-same way Where paths are rough and thorny.

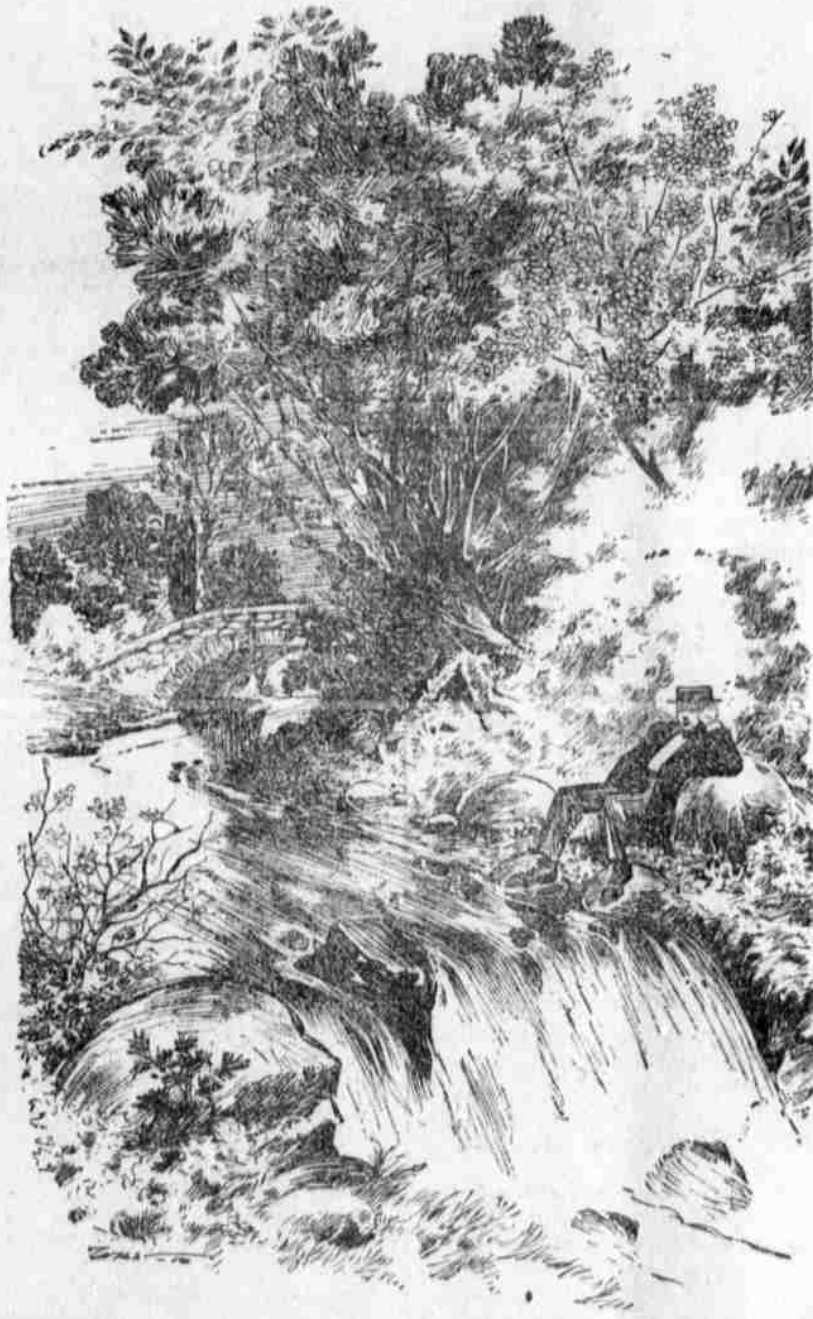

The same old load, the same old hill To tackle every morning, With little hope when night's begun That you may rest when settling sun Is all the West adorning.

I do not know, I cannot still The cry that in you rises— And yet it seems that all will blend In golden sunset at the end When God awards his prizes.

The King who sets the tasks for men Will surely send a heaven To pay for all the weary days, To pay for all the rocky ways, And guide you safe to heaven! Byron Williams.

THE STREAM

By Byron Williams.

Softer and sweeter than Lydian measures, There where the lilies are nodding at play. Down in the valley the brook croons its lay; Birds perched aloft sing their psalm of gladness. Over the moss-covered stones it is gilding, Swelling their throats in a rivalry sweet. Gliding and gurgling and singing away, Zephyrs swirl past with a breath of the forest, Telling their tales of the courier fleet. List to its rhapsodies, harken its chorus, Deep in the shade of its banks gently sloping, Strains that are blended in Nature's great song; Lovers are hushing the story of old; Babbling and tinkling in cadences pleasing, Softly its rhythm steals over their senses, Hark to the brook as it bubbles along, Blending a song in the plans they unfold. See where the sun sends its shafts that are golden, Sing on forever, O faithful old river, Making a diamond cloud out of the spray; Sing me to sleep, river, sing me to sleep, Look where the elm throws its shade o'er the waters, Sing me to sleep, river, sing me to sleep!

HE'LL STICK TO HIS PIPE.

Let the Other Fellows Daily with Cigars and Cigarettes.

One particular objection many of the men patrons have to the big palatial hotels in the city is that they can't smoke their favorite pipes in the public halls without becoming the cynosure of all eyes.

"The other evening," said a guest at the St. Regis, "I sat down in one of the comfortable armchairs in the hall to enjoy my pipe that's been my constant friend for the last seven years. There were several people sitting near me, most of whom were men, and one or two were smoking cigars or cigarettes. I didn't see a pipe in sight anywhere, and that made me a little uncertain as to whether I should be violating an etiquette rule of the house."

"I drew out my briar, and, after I had got it going comfortably, I noticed that the guests near me began to melt away by ones and twos, until presently I was left with a good share of the hall to myself. Some of them did not leave the hall altogether, but moved to seats furthest from me. Of course I knew what the cause was, but I didn't care. In my opinion, the man who smokes a pipe is a head sight better than any dozen men who smoke cigars and cigarettes."—New York Times.
